Financial objectives

Market-Linked CDs are flexible investment solutions. Designed for buy and hold strategies, the investor profile is broad, including retirees, millennials, and families saving for college expenses.

Investors may be attracted by Market-Linked CDs' ability to provide:

100% principal protection when held to maturity regardless of the performance of the reference asset, subject to the issuer's credit risk

The potential for enhanced returns compared to those available with traditional bank deposit products

Focused exposure to a specific financial view

Investment horizons of one to seven years

Tools for shaping portfolios

Market-Linked CDs may have broad applications in a well-balanced portfolio and have become a tool that individuals and their financial advisors should consider to meet certain financial objectives. These CDs can be used as a complement to existing assets in a portfolio or as a way to employ a tactical or strategic view.

Market-Linked CDs can also provide an efficient means to attain the true benefits of portfolio diversification, allowing investors to conveniently invest in alternative asset classes that may be difficult to invest in directly.

Market-linked CDs payoff structures can range from simple to complex; some pay coupons (e.g., fixed, floating, or a combination), while others pay at maturity; some may be callable, with the issuer terminating the investment early for a full return of principal.

No two clients or investment objectives are the same, which is why HSBC continuously seeks to develop innovative investment products to provide clients with financial strategies to help balance risk and reward.

Risks and Considerations

Market-Linked CDs are linked to the performance of specific underlying assets and are not equivalent to investing directly in that asset. It is important to note that Market-Linked CDs may not always reflect the actual performance of the underlying assets and have different risks than traditional CDs. For example, a Market-Linked CD may have features such as a cap or averaging, which could result in the performance of the CD differing from a direct investment in the underlying index or reference asset. A Market-Linked CD might not earn any interest and some participate in only a limited amount of the increase of an index (e.g., a cap rate).

There is currently no established secondary trading market for Market-Linked CDs. In the event that clients are able to redeem Market-Linked CDs prior to maturity, the CDs may redeem at less than the original amount due to fluctuations in the underlying assets and other market factors.

In all instances, like other investments, Market-Linked CDs should be carefully evaluated with respect to financial objectives, suitability, duration, calculation methods, tax considerations, and other risk factors. In addition, under US tax rules, investors may be subject to US taxes on interest income that have not been paid during the tax year. Investors should consult their own tax advisors prior to investment.

For any Market-Linked CD, please read the disclosure materials provided by your registered financial representative carefully before investing.
